Camera Obscura provides a forum for scholarship and debate on feminism, culture, and media studies. The journal encourages contributions in areas such as the conjunctions of gender, race, class, and sexuality with audiovisual culture; new histories and theories of film, television, video, and digital media; and politically engaged approaches to a range of media practices.

Contributor Information

Camera Obscura seeks substantial review essays (approximately 25–30 pages) that engage with current academic and popular debates in feminism, culture, and media studies. The editors are particularly interested in essays that identify and intervene in trends or tendencies across books, genres, media, or disciplines.

Camera Obscura is also interested in publishing interviews with feminist practitioners in the mass- or alternative-culture industries.
