Peace and Mind: Civilian Scholarship from Common Knowledge
Jeffrey M. Perl, Editor

In the series Contemporary European Cultural Studies
Gianni Vattimo and Santiago Zabala, Editors

A collection of essays, addressed to veterans of the “culture wars” and their students, that define and exemplify a new genre of scholarship devoted to irenic ends and civil means. Includes case studies by Clifford Geertz, Bruno Latour, Gianni Vattimo, and other important theorists.

“This distinguished collection of essays . . . deserves to be widely read and also to be taken to heart.”
— Peter Burke, Emeritus Professor of Cultural History, Cambridge University. Fellow of Emmanuel College.

“Peace and Mind dares to analyze belligerence as a syndrome and to put our ongoing crises, our declinological tendencies, and our religious clashes on the irenic couch of scholarship.”
— Julia Kristeva, Professor Emerita of Linguistics, University of Paris VII

“...in a time when academics outside the sciences are demeaned by those in government and business whose labors have brought us anything but peace, this how-to manual for “civilian scholarship” ought to stimulate a ton of soul-searching among culture warriors in the humanities.”
— Stanley N. Katz, Director, Center for Arts and Cultural Policy Studies, Princeton University

“Since its inception, Common Knowledge has been uncommonly excellent. It is a great boon to public discussion to have this thoughtful collection of essays assembled in one place.”
— Alan Wolfe, John Gilbert Winant Visiting Professor of American Government at Oxford University
