A twice-yearly, internationally oriented scholarly periodical, Arena Journal will continue a commitment of the first series of Arena to publishing material which reflects on a renewed left critical practice. It is a place for theoretically and ethically concerned discussion on the prospects for co-operation within contemporary life. Arena Journal will respond to the challenges of the last twenty years to the ‘classical’ accounts of social life which have emerged from theories of subjectivity and the sign, challenges which have affected the status of figures such as Marx, Weber and Durkheim, as well as post-classical theorists such as Habermas and Giddens. A central focus of the Journal is upon the interpretive and technical intellectual practices and their relation to the reconstruction of social processes: class relations, forms of selfhood and community life. We welcome contributions from various perspectives which engage with the Journal’s special concerns.

India and Pakistan
The First Fifty Years
Selig S. Harrison, Paul H. Kreisberg and Dennis Kux, Editors

One fifth of the world's people live in India and Pakistan. Looking back on their first fifty years of independence, leading specialists on South Asia assess their progress and problems, their foreign and defense policies and their relations with the United States. The three coeditors, who compare the achievements of India and Pakistan in a perceptive introductory overview, combine journalistic, diplomatic and academic experience. Selig S. Harrison served as South Asia Bureau Chief of the Washington Post, Paul H. Kreisberg is a former Deputy Chairman of the State Department's Policy Planning Council, and Dennis Kux is a former Director of the India Desk in the State Department.

East African Doctors
A History of the Modern Profession
John Iliffe

This is a history of the training and work of East African doctors since modern medicine began in the region during the 1870s. It discusses recruitment and education of doctors, their understanding and practice of modern medicine, the struggle to secure professional status and to preserve it amid recent political and economic decline. Proposing a new understanding of professionalization in the Third World, it ends with an account of their important contribution to the study and control of AIDS.

European Commercial Enterprise in Pre-Colonial India
Om Prakash

European traders first appeared in India at the end of the fifteenth century and established corporate enterprises in the region, such as the English and Dutch East India companies. This volume considers how, over a span of three centuries, the Indian economy expanded and was integrated into the premodern world economy as a result of these interactions.

Bodies and Persons
Comparative Perspectives from Africa and Melanesia
Michael Lambek and Andrew Strathern, Editors

This book suggests a bold comparative approach to broad cultural differences between Africa and Melanesia. Its theme is personhood, understood in terms of what anthropologists call embodiment. These concepts are applied to questions ranging from the meanings of spirit possession, to the logics of witchcraft and kinship relations, the use of rituals in healing, and even the impact of capitalism.

Roots in the African Dust
Sustaining the Drylands
Michael Mortimore

The traditional image of contemporary Africa is of a continent dogged by poverty, drought, degradation and famine. This study, drawing on the best work of the past decade and based on researched case studies from East and West Africa, rejects the notion of runaway desertification, driven by population growth and inappropriate land use. It suggests a more optimistic model of sustainable land use and an appropriate set of policy priorities to support dryland peoples in their efforts to sustain land and livelihoods.

Colonial Fantasies
Towards a Feminist Reading of Orientalism
Meyda Yegenoglu

Meyda Yegenoglu investigates the intersection between post-colonial and feminist criticism, via the Western fascination with the veiled women of the Orient. Linking representations of cultural and sexual difference, she shows the Oriental woman to have functioned as the veiled interior of Western identity. Her original and compelling argument calls into question dualistic conceptions of identity and difference, West and East, masculinist assumptions of Orientalism, and Western feminist discourses that seek to "liberate" the veiled woman.

Comparative Studies of South Asia, Africa and the Middle East

Comparative Studies of South Asia, Africa and the Middle East (CSSAAME) is a semi-annual journal. Moving beyond the paradigmatic divides of area studies, scholarly articles and review essays in CSSAAME explore the shared concerns and histories of the region, offer stimulating perspectives on interdisciplinary debates and challenge established analytical models. Launched in 1995, CSSAAME has merged with the former South Asia Bulletin and publishes articles from around the world. Recent special issues include Untouchability and Beyond: French Studies of Indian Dalits; a three-part series on Muslim Identity Politics; African Labor and Diaspora.

Critical Acclaim:

The old tension between history and theory finds itself completely outmoded in CSSAAME whose extensively historical and theoretical articles tell us crucial things not only about their local subjects but about globalization itself, class structure, politics and culture all over the world.

(Fredric Jameson, Duke University)

Here is a journal that has consistently responded to the shifting challenges of interregional comparison...It never fails to combine intensity of areal focus with geographic breadth while anchoring local cultural debates in appropriate macroregional perspectives.

(Arjun Appadurai, University of Chicago)

CSSAAME is the only academic journal that explores thematic issues of global importance from these three regions of the world [South Asia, Africa and the Middle East]. I applaud the leadership and vision, the energy and the insight that have shaped CSSAAME to date.

(Bruce Lawrence, Duke University)
