Comparative Studies of South Asia, Africa and the Middle East

Vol. XVIII No. 2 1998

The Emergence of Modernity and Nationalism in Iran
Mohamad Tavakoli-Targhi: Modernity, Heterotopia and Homeless Texts
A. Reza Sheikholeslami: The Patrimonial Monarchy of Nasir al-Din Shah
Homa Katouzian: Problems of Democracy and the Public Sphere in Iran
Negar Mottahedeh: Qurrat al-Ayn Tahirah’s Unveiling and the Massacre of the Babis
Firoozeh Kashani-Sabet: The Frontier Polemics of Quarantines in Ottoman Turkey and Iran
Michael Rubin: The Telegraph and Frontier Politics in Iran
Pedram Partovi: Authorial Intention and Illocutionary Force in Jalal Al-i Ahmad’s Gharbzadigi

Identity Politics and Global Economics
Abbas Vali: The Fragmentation of Identity and Politics in Kurdish Nationalism
David Pizzo: The Museumization of Fascism
Devesh Vijay: Recent Conceptual Shifts in Left Writings on Indian Politics
J.I. Dibua: Neo-Liberalism and Africa’s Development Crisis
Notes on Contributors
J.I. Dibua, Department of History, Morgan State University, Baltimore.
Sheridan Johns, Department of Political Science, Duke University.
Vasant Kaiwar, Department of History, Duke University.
Firoozeh Kashani-Sabet, Department of History, Yale University.
Homa Katouzian, Department of Politics, University of Exeter.
Sucheta Mazumdar, Department of History, Duke University.
Negar Mottahedeh, Center for Near Eastern Studies, University of Chicago.
Pedram Partovi, Department of History, University of Chicago.
David Piuo, Department of History, University of North Carolina, Chapel Hill.
Michael Rubin, Department of History, Yale University.
A. Reza Sheikholeslami, The Oriental Institute, University of Oxford.
Mohamad Tavakoli-Targhi, Department of History, Illinois State University, Normal.
Abbas Vali, Department of Politics, University of Wales, Swansea.
Devesh Vijay, Independent Scholar, Delhi.
Michael O. West, African and African American Studies, University of North Carolina, Chapel Hill.

Acknowledgments
Comparative Studies of South Asia, Africa and the Middle East (formerly South Asia Bulletin) is partially funded by and based at the Center for International Studies, Duke University. We are happy to acknowledge production support provided by the staff. Additional financial support is provided by the Office of the Dean of Arts and Sciences, the History Department, Duke University and the African and African American Studies Program.

Forthcoming: Special Issue on Labor and the Left in South Africa (Vol. XIX No. 1, 1999)
Peter Alexander: Coal, Control, and Class Experience in South Africa’s Rand Revolt of 1922
Allison Drew: Interview with Leonard Gentle, Manchester, April 1999
Phil Eidelberg: Guerilla Warfare and the Decline of Urban Apartheid / The Shaping of a New African Middle Class and the Transformation of the African National Congress
Andrew Nash: The Moment of Western Marxism in South Africa
Lungisile Ntsebeza: Democratization and Traditional Authorities in the New South Africa
Vladimir Shubin: Digging in the Gold Mine / The Mayibuye Centre Archive as a Source on the History of the South African Liberation Movement
Lucien van der Walt: “The Industrial Union is the Embryo of the Socialist Commonwealth”: The International Socialist League and Revolutionary Syndicalism in South Africa, 1915-1920

• Plus, articles by Amiya Bagchi, Valentine Moghadam, Bonny Ibhwoh, Amir Arsalan Afkhami on aspects of labor, gender, globalization and modernization.