Multispecies Studies
A special issue of Environmental Humanities (8:1)
Thom van Dooren, Ursula Münster,
Eben Kirksey, Deborah Bird Rose,
Matthew Chrulew, and Anna Tsing, issue editors

The emerging field of multispecies studies, grounded in passionate immersion in the lives of fungi, microorganisms, animals, plants, and others, is opening up novel ways of engaging with worlds around us. This issue brings together leading scholars to explore what is at stake—epistemologically, politically, ethically—for different forms of life caught up in diverse relationships of knowing and living together. Topics include the worlds of sheep and shepherds; of stones, worms, salmon, and forest-devouring beetles; of viruses and their elephants; of seals, crows, and lava flows in Hawaii; and of frogs-as-pregnancy-tests and possible agents of pathogenic fungal spread. Contributors explore what difference curious and careful attention to others might make in our efforts to inhabit and coconstitute flourishing worlds in these difficult times.
