Comparative Studies of South Asia, Africa and the Middle East seeks to bring region and area studies into conversation with a rethinking of theory and the disciplines. Its aim is twofold: to ask how area and region are implicated in the production of geohistorical universals and, conversely, to attend to the specificity of non-Western social, political, and intellectual formations as these challenge normative assumptions of social life, cultural practice, and historical transformation.

Common Knowledge is devoted to what its editors have termed “civilian scholarship.” Its mission is to open lines of communication between the academy and the community of thoughtful people outside its walls. The journal, whose “variety of material and opinions gives it a pleasing heterogeneity” (Times Literary Supplement), challenges the ways we think about theory and its relevance to humanity.
