MINING LANGUAGE

Racial Thinking, Indigenous Knowledge, and Colonial Metallurgy in the Early Modern Iberian World

Allison Margaret Bigelow

“Bigelow approaches mining as a vernacular science, and, in doing so, she has written an innovative, original history of the Atlantic world that centers Native America and the African diaspora. This important book, as erudite as it is methodologically creative, forces us to think in new ways about the relationship between colonialism, epistemology, and race.”

ELOQUENCE EMBODIED

Nonverbal Communication among French and Indigenous Peoples in the Americas

Céline Garayon

“An impressive and ambitious piece of scholarship . . . a sweeping and deeply researched book on nonverbal communication across the early colonial French world. Exploring a wide variety of Indigenous and French practices, beliefs, and ideas, she reframes our understanding of the core communication processes that underlay even the most basic colonial interactions.”

In League Against King Alcohol
Native American Women and the Woman's Christian Temperance Union, 1874–1933

By Thomas John Lappas

Many Americans are familiar with the real, but repeatedly stereotyped problem of alcohol abuse in Indian country. Few people are aware of how American Indian women joined forces with the WCTU to press for positive change in their communities, a critical chapter of American cultural history explored in depth for the first time in In League Against King Alcohol.

Mapping Indigenous Land
Native Land Grants in Colonial New Spain

By Ana Pulido Rull

Between 1536 and 1601, indigenous artists crafted more than two hundred maps to be used as evidence in litigation over the allocation of land. Mapping Indigenous Land explores how these maps did more than simply record the disputed territories for lawsuits. They also enabled indigenous communities to translate their ideas about contested spaces into visual form; offered arguments for the defense of these spaces; and in some cases even helped protect indigenous land against harmful requests.

Strike Fear in the Land
Pedro de Alvarado and the Conquest of Guatemala, 1520–1541

By W. George Lovell, Christopher H. Lutz and Wendy Kramer

The conquest of Guatemala was brutal, prolonged and complex, fraught with intrigue and deception, and not at all clear-cut. Written with literary flair, Strike Fear in the Land is an arresting saga of personalities and controversies, conveying as never before the turmoil of this pivotal period in Mesoamerican history.
