French Historical Studies

VOLUME 26  ■  NUMBER 2  ■  SPRING 2003

SPECIAL ISSUE: FRENCH HISTORY IN THE VISUAL SPHERE
EDITED BY DANIEL J. SHERMAN AND MARY D. SHERIFF

Convergences: Visualizing French History
MARY D. SHERIFF AND DANIEL J. SHERMAN 173

ARTICLES

Image and Illustration in Jean Fouquet’s Grandes Chroniques de France
ERIK INGLIS 185

The Politics of Promiscuity: Masculinity and Heroic Representation at the Court of Henry IV
KATHERINE B. CRAWFORD 225

Illustrated Historiography and the Image of the Past in Nineteenth-Century France
MAURICE SAMUELS 253

Propaganda and the Republic of the Arts in Antoine-Jean Gros’s Napoléon Visiting the Battlefield of Eylau the Morning after the Battle
DAVID O’BRIEN 281

Delacroix’s Sardanapalus: The Life and Death of the Royal Body
ELISABETH A. FRASER 315

“Race” As Spectacle in Late-Nineteenth-Century French Art and Popular Culture
JAMES SMALLS 351

NEWS AND PUBLICATIONS

News 383

Recent Books and Dissertations on French History
Compiled by THOMAS J. SCHAEPER 385

Abstracts 395
From the Editors

With this issue of French Historical Studies, we resume the important tradition established by our predecessors, James Contreni and James Farr, of publishing occasional special issues under the supervision of guest editors on themes of potential interest to historians in all fields of French history. The present issue, entitled “French History in the Visual Sphere,” assumes an even larger audience of historians and specialists in other disciplines since it seeks to demonstrate how historians, literary critics and art historians working with visual evidence might borrow from each other’s disciplinary concepts and techniques to gain fresh perspectives on established topics in their own domains.

Our choice of guest editors for this issue proved especially felicitous. Dan Sherman and Mary Sheriff worked closely together throughout the project, bringing to bear their respective fields of expertise in cultural history and art history to confirm the benefits of interdisciplinary collaboration and professional teamwork. To both scholars, we express our deep appreciation and admiration for their exceptional skill in providing editorial advice to the authors of the six manuscripts that they selected for inclusion in this issue. Their jointly written introduction highlights their objectives in putting together this collection and provides an elegant comparative framework of analysis for appreciating the contributions of each author. We also thank Daniel Sherman for proposing the theme for this special issue while he was serving as a member of the journal’s editorial board.

Jo Burr Margadant and Ted W. Margadant, Editors