Genre: Forms of Discourse and Culture is a quarterly publication devoted to the study of the codes, conventions, and histories of generic forms in the context of their cultural manifestations and effects. It publishes articles which deal with questions of genre in both literary and nonliterary forms, which bring a broad range of disciplinary and interdisciplinary approaches to genre, or which consider theoretical, institutional, or political dimensions of discourse. Genre appears in Spring, Summer, Fall and Winter issues. Subscriptions in the United States are $45 for individuals, $65 for libraries. Foreign subscriptions are $75, $75 for libraries. Claims for replacement of missing numbers must be received within three months of publication for U.S. subscribers, six months for foreign subscribers. Manuscripts, in triplicate and accompanied by return postage, should follow the MLA Style Sheet with notes placed after the text. All correspondence should be addressed to the Editors. Genre was founded in 1968 at Chicago Circle by Edward F. Heuston, Donald E. Billiar, and Robert L. Vales.
