The English Department of the City College (CCNY) of the City University of New York (CUNY) announces a search for a tenure-track Assistant Professor or Associate Professor who works in scientific humanities, post-humanities, or literary ecologies. We would particularly welcome applicants with interdisciplinary interests in one of the following: literature and cognitive science or neuroscience, literature and medicine; literature and constructing scientific communities; literature and evolutionism/Darwinism/anti-Darwinism; eco-criticism, science and religion; science and genre fiction; science, race, and ethnicity; science and sexuality; science and gender history. Candidates should also be interested in developing collaborations within the department, with faculty in the history and philosophy of science, and/or with faculty in the College's Division of Science, Grove School of Engineering, and Sophie Davis School of Biomedical Education.

The position begins Fall 2015, and will include teaching on the undergraduate and master's level. Minimum qualifications include Ph.D. in hand by September 2015; evidence of a serious commitment to scholarship, teaching, and service.

One of our nation's greatest democratic experiments, The City College of New York was conceived in 1847 to educate “the children of the whole people." Since its founding, it has provided free or low-cost, high-quality education in a wide variety of disciplines, producing more Nobel laureates than any other public institution in the United States. Set on a striking 35-acre hilltop campus in upper Manhattan, CCNY enrolls each year more than 16,000 students who pursue undergraduate and graduate degrees in the College of Liberal Arts and Sciences; the Bernard and Anne Spitzer School of Architecture; the School of Education; the Grove School of Engineering; the Sophie Davis School of Biomedical Education, and the Colin L. Powell School for Civic and Global Leadership.

TSQ offers a venue for interdisciplinary scholarship that contests the objectification, pathologization, and exoticization of transgender lives. Its mission is to examine how “transgender” comes into play as a category, a process, a social assemblage, an increasingly intelligible gender identity, and an identifiable threat to gender normativity.
