SOCIAL SCIENCE RESEARCH
IN LATIN AMERICA
CHARLES WAGLEY, Editor

Each of the papers in this volume, written by a well-known scholar with long experience in the Latin American field, evaluates critically the present status of our knowledge in a particular discipline of the social sciences—anthropology, economics, geography, history, sociology, political science, and legal studies. We learn what has been done to date, where knowledge is lacking, and the new and significant areas of research for the future. Accompanied by excellent bibliographies, and a general introduction by the editor, these surveys will be of special interest to students, scholars, policy-makers, and administrators who are interested in Latin America.
