CARMEN DIANA DEERE is Director of the Center for Latin American Studies and Professor of Food and Resource Economics and Latin American Studies at the University of Florida, Gainesville. For many years she was Professor of Economics at the University of Massachusetts, Amherst. She is the coauthor (with Magdalena León) of Empowering Women: Land and Property Rights in Latin America (University of Pittsburgh Press, 2001), which won the Bryce Wood Best Book Award of the Latin American Studies Association. She has written extensively on agricultural development, agrarian reform, rural women, and the gender division of labor in rural Latin America.

MAGDALENA LEÓN, a Colombian sociologist, was on the Humanities faculty of the National University of Colombia in Bogotá and has been a visiting scholar and lecturer at Columbia University, Sussex University, and other institutions in Madrid, Santo Domingo, Lima, Quito, and Mexico City. In 2000 she received the National Prize of Scientific Merit from the Colombian Association for the Advancement of Science. She is the coauthor (with Carmen Diana Deere) of Empowering Women: Land and Property Rights in Latin America, which also appeared in Spanish and Portuguese, as well as of many articles on rural women. She has edited, coedited, or coauthored eight other books on gender issues in Latin America.

CYNTHIA E. MILTON works on history in the Andes: in particular, perceptions of poverty in colonial Quito and historical representations of violence in contemporary Peru. She is the author of The Many Meanings of Poverty: Colonialism, Social Compacts, and Assistance in Eighteenth-Century Ecuador (Stanford University Press, forthcoming) and a coeditor of The Art of Truthtelling about Authoritarian Rule (University of Wisconsin Press, 2005). She is an assistant professor in the Department of History at the Université de Montréal.
