U.S. Presidents and Latin American Interventions
Pursuing Regime Change in the Cold War
Michael Grow

“An insightful and valuable study. For those familiar with the contours of U.S.–Latin American relations, this book will reshape and reinvigorate the debate; for those newer to this subject, it will serve as an accessible introduction to a perpetually contested subject.”—Journal of Contemporary History

“Grow demonstrates that domestic political imperatives continued to be fundamental in presidential decisions to promote regime change in Latin America through military, covert, and proxy interventions during and immediately following the Cold War.”—Diplomatic History

“A rich, fast-moving, and wonderfully readable overview of U.S. interventionism in Latin America during the Cold War.”—H-Net Reviews

“A stunning account that should be at the top of Washington’s reading list.”—Lars Schoultz, author of Beneath the United States: A History of U.S. Policy toward Latin America

“A wonderful and refreshingly clear-eyed book.”—Howard J. Wiarda, author of The Soul of Latin America

Belief and Unbelief

During the academic years 2012/13 and 2013/14, the Shelby Cullom Davis Center for Historical Studies will focus on belief and unbelief and how they have interacted in history. How has the line been drawn between religion and other forms of deeply held conviction: secularism, secular religions, political theologies, and the like? At issue are not just questions of demarcation and definition but processes: secularization, proselytizing, conversion. How does belief manifest itself in lived experience, in ritual, observance, and daily-life practices? How have people and cultures moved across the borderline between belief and unbelief? How has belief itself become a subject of study, whether from a secular or theological point of view? As always, we hope to address these questions from a wide variety of periods and places, from prehistory to the present and from all parts of the world.

The Center will offer a limited number of research fellowships for one or two semesters, running from September to January and from February to June. Early career scholars must have their doctoral degrees in hand at the time of the application. Fellows are expected to live in Princeton in order to take an active part in the intellectual interchange with other members of the Seminar. Funds are limited, and candidates are, therefore, strongly urged to apply to other grant-giving institutions as well as the Center if they wish to come for a full year.

To apply please link to: http://jobs.princeton.edu, requisition 1200436. The deadline for receipt of applications and letters of recommendation for fellowships for 2013/2014 is December 1, 2012. Please note that we will not accept faxed applications. Applicants must apply online and submit a CV, cover letter, research proposal, abstract of proposal, and contact information for three references.
