The Chicana/o Education Pipeline: History, Institutional Critique, and Resistance

Edited by Michaela J. L. Mares-Tamayo and Daniel G. Solórzano

This collection considers the relationships between Chicana/o students, families, and communities and the school settings that make up the Chicana/o education pipeline. Topics include bilingual education, the high school walkouts, Latinas in higher education, anti–ethnic studies legislation, and Jotería identity. The essays, which appeared in Aztlán: A Journal of Chicano Studies between 1970 and 2015, were chosen for their potential to spark discussions about Chicana/o experiences and resilience in US schools.
