LABOR

Studies in Working-Class History

Leon Fink, editor

The official journal of the Labor and Working-Class History Association (LAWCHA)

As a site for both historical research and commentary, Labor provides a basis for understanding the roots of our current economic dilemmas—particularly who will do the work and under what economic and political terms. Although the tradition from which Labor derives its energy has focused primarily on social movements and institutions based on industrial labor, the journal gives equal attention to other critical labor systems and social contexts, including agricultural work, slavery, unpaid and domestic labor, the informal sector, and the professions.

Economies of Dispossession

Indigeneity, Race, Capitalism

An issue of Social Text (135)

Jodi A. Byrd, Alyosha Goldstein, Jodi Melamed and Chandan Reddy, issue editors

This special issue addresses the ways in which financialization, debt, and expropriation today work through social relations already configured and disposed by imperial conquest and racial capitalism. Theorizing dispossession through a materialist understanding of comparative racialization and imperial formation, The issue brings together scholars of critical indigenous studies and critical ethnic studies who seek to intervene in current debates on the crises and contradictions of capitalist accumulation.

Contributors Joanne Barker, Jodi A. Byrd, Lisa Marie Cacho, Alyosha Goldstein, Grace Kyungwon Hong, Jodi Kim, Jodi Melamed, Chandan Reddy, Kristen L. Simmons, and Kaya Naomi Williams
