Sleepwalking into a New World
The Emergence of Italian City Communes in the Twelfth Century
Chris Wickham

“This elegant, concise, and highly readable book tackles afresh one of the great problems of world history. Generously acknowledging the research of previous historians and scrupulously avoiding foregone conclusions, Wickham compares Milan, Pisa, and Rome to revelatory effect. This is a work of huge analytical and explanatory power that can be read for sheer intellectual joy.”
—Jinty Nelson, King’s College London

Approaches to Teaching Behn’s Oroonoko

Edited by Cynthia Richards and Mary Ann O’Donnell

“Oroonoko is an excellent choice for this series because of its popularity in an exceptionally broad range of college and university courses, and this volume does an excellent job presenting the scholarly and pedagogical diversity used in teaching the work.”

—Richard Frohock

Oklahoma State University

Once merely a footnote in Restoration and eighteenth-century studies and rarely taught, Oroonoko; or, The Royal Slave (1688), by Aphra Behn, is now essential reading for scholars and a classroom favorite. It appears in general surveys and in courses on early modern British writers, postcolonial literature, American literature, women’s literature, drama, the slave narrative, and autobiography.

Teaching Early Modern English Literature from the Archives

Edited by Heidi Brayman Hackel and Ian Frederick Moulton

“The volume brilliantly combines the visionary and the pragmatic and is a gold mine of great ideas about how to engage students in the production of knowledge. It is a remarkably timely project.”
—Michael Schoenfeldt
University of Michigan, Ann Arbor

Teaching Early Modern English Literature from the Archives focuses on English literature and culture from 1473 to 1700. Essays discuss a range of physical and virtual archives—both major sources and rich collections that are less known (including affordable and free options)—and adopt comparative approaches involving Latin, French, Spanish, German, and early American texts.

Invites submissions of articles on the topic of women and gender in the early modern period, 1400-1750. The Journal offers an award of $1000 for the best article in each volume.

The Forum for Volume 11.1 (Fall 2016) will focus on women and science.

Topics to be considered may include any subject that addresses the activity of women in science (including medicine), natural philosophy, or natural history broadly conceived. Forum pieces may consider, for example, women as scientists in any field, the influence of women as patrons of scientists and academies, or the scientific study of gender. Proposals for other related topics are also welcome.

Please contact the editors at emwj@miami.edu if you are interested in proposing a topic.
