Palestine beyond National Frames
Emerging Politics, Cultures, and Claims
An issue of South Atlantic Quarterly (117:1)
Sophie Richter-Devroe and Ruba Salih, issue editors

The “national” has functioned as the affective and symbolic frame for the political project of liberation for Palestinians and has also been the underlying grid of most of the scholarly work on Palestine. This issue goes beyond national frames to disclose a different dimension of the Palestinian politics of liberation. It sheds light on an indigenous population engaged in ongoing and everyday collective resistance to protect their “home” and defend their “land”—as these are constantly reconfigured and imagined across place and time—rather than a memorialized homeland or national territory.

Terrorist Assemblages
Homonationalism in Queer Times
JASBIR K. PUAR
Tenth Anniversary Edition
Next Wave
29 illustrations, paper, $28.95

“In this powerful book, Jasbir K. Puar offers a stunning critique of ‘homonational’ politics. She rethinks intersections as assemblages, as networks of affect, intensity, and movement. The very rigor of her critique suggests an unflinching optimism about what is possible for queer politics.”—Sara Ahmed

The Right to Maim
Debility, Capacity, Disability
JASBIR K. PUAR
ANIMA
18 illustrations, paper, $26.95

“Jasbir K. Puar’s latest book offers us a new vocabulary for understanding disability, debility, and capacity, three terms that anchor a sharp and provocative analysis of biopolitics of neoliberalism, police power, and militarization. Gaining recognition for disability within terms that instrumentalize and efface its meanings carries a great risk. So too does opting out of discourse altogether. ... Her deft understanding of how the attribution of ‘capacity’ can work for and against people in precarious positions will prove crucial for a wiser and more radical struggle for justice.”—Judith Butler
