Our Readers Comment on Mediterranean Quarterly:

“Mediterranean Quarterly is a unique forum that raises many foreign policy questions in a critical arena of world politics—the intersection and confluence of the world’s major civilizations and cultural patterns. This insightful, critical, and diverse forum provides a discourse for scholars and statesmen to raise questions of global significance that have profound implications for both the thinking and practice of international diplomacy.”

Ivo Josipović, President of the Republic of Croatia

“The journal is unique in many ways, and has made its mark in the policy-making world and global academy. [The editor] ensure[s] that thinkers from all littoral states as well as academic experts in the US have an open and uncensored forum to present and debate ideas. Mediterranean Quarterly has no agenda to promote other than the search for truth without fear or favor. But more important, it has made a point to open its pages to prominent African leaders to address issues in [the] true Mediterranean spirit of respect for human dignity. . . . I had the privilege of joining a stellar list of contributors, among them former President Jimmy Carter, former UN Secretary General Boutros Boutros-Ghali, the presidents of Turkey and Croatia, President Salva Kiir [Mayardit] of South Sudan, and a long list of academics, foreign ministers, prime ministers, and prominent diplomats. . . . Mediterranean Quarterly is a forum for thinkers and not a place for waging . . . ideological campaign[s].” Congressman Donald M. Payne, Congressional Record, 6 October 2011, E1793

“This sophisticated journal succinctly presents the views of leading thinkers and analysts—and players and retired players—on pressing diplomatic questions of the day.” Washington Post
