Orientalism and Modernism: The Legacy of China in Pound and Williams
Zhaoming Qian

"Orientalism and Modernism clearly sets the record straight by addressing the issue of how Chinese poetry and culture helped precipitate the transition of Pound and Williams toward high modernism. It is a historically focused, meticulously researched, and passionately argued book."—Zhang Longxi, University of California, Riverside

Bad Objects: Essays Popular and Unpopular
Naomi Schor

"As one has come to expect from Naomi Schor, the arguments she advances are forceful, challenging and, above all, elegant. Highly individual and distinct, these essays consistently achieve their aim of reposing the essential questions of feminist theory."
—Peggy Kamuf, University of Southern California

"This is an impressive volume of elegant essays that will confirm Schor's reputation as one of feminism's finest scholars, and one of the most expansive and precise minds in French studies."
—Judith Butler, University of California, Berkeley

Carnal Rhetoric
Milton's Iconoclasm and the Poetics of Desire
Lana Cable

“This is an exciting book to read. Cable's Carnal Rhetoric is one of the foremost statements concerning the 'theory' of affective stylistics and the contribution that it provides to our understanding of Milton's writings. . . . Cable strikes out in a radically new direction in Milton studies.”
—Albert Labriola, Duquesne University

Pleasures Taken
Performances of Sexuality and Loss in Victorian Photographs
Carol Mavor

“Pleasures Taken couldn't have been more aptly titled. A lusciously written study of luscious images, it invokes smell, touch, disequilibrium, the heft of labor and the weight of loss, to show how much more than spectatorial are the wrenching and stirring relations around Victorian photographs.”—Eve Kosofsky Sedgwick

Figures of Conversion
“The Jewish Question” and English National Identity
Michael Ragussis

“I was astounded by the depth and brilliance of this book. Ragussis makes the case that the Jew for British culture has always been the defining figure of difference. His literary examples are striking, but he also shows how the changing atmosphere alters and restructures the very notion of the Jew in British cultural life. His audience, readers interested in Jewish questions and British culture, will find material and insights not to be found in any existing literature.”—Sander L. Gilman, University of Chicago

Post-Contemporary Interventions

DUKE UNIVERSITY PRESS Box 90660 Durham, North Carolina 27708-0660
Since its foundation in 1965, Forum for Modern Language Studies has published articles on an extremely wide range of literary and linguistic studies, from the Middle Ages to the present day.

The journal reflects the essential pluralism of modern language and literature studies and is an open forum for worldwide scholarly discussion, offering fresh knowledge and insight in an accessible form.

The journal's coverage has recently been further extended to include the study of three more areas: film, in its relation to language, literature, and history; translation studies; the relation of applied linguistics to language-teaching at the tertiary level.

Forum for Modern Language Studies appears quarterly in January, April, July, and October. As well as articles, it features short notes on recently published books, occasional review articles on major new publications, and a Research and Information section for brief factual notes and queries. Each annual volume includes at least one special issue devoted to articles on a theme or topic of a comparative nature; recent and forthcoming special issues include: Nationalism, National Identity and Europe in Modern Fiction; Satire; The Film as Text; The European Avant-Garde, 1907-1917; Translation; The Practice of Medieval Literature.

Recent and forthcoming articles include:

- Edward Timms The Christian Satirist: A Contradiction in Terms?
- Mark M. Pele Fragment VIII(G) of the Canterbury Tales: Oppositions in Themes and Imagery from the Roman de la Rose
- Mahmoud Kharbutli Marlow’s “Victory” in Conrad’s Heart of Darkness
- Elizabeth T. Howe The Power of Blood in Cervantes’ La fuerza de la sangre
- Mark Millington Cultural Encounter in Vargas Llosa’s La casa verde and El hablador
- Berys Gaut Making Sense of Film: Neoformalism and its Limits
- Phil Powrie Godard’s Prénom: Carmen (1984), Masochism, and the Male Gaze
- Elena Glazov-Corrigan A Reappraisal of Shakespeare’s Hamlet: In Defence of Dr Zhivago
- Stephen Hutchings Myth, Plot Transformation and Iteration in Ivan Bunin’s Fiction
- Matthew Tanner Chemistry in Schlegel’s Athenaeum Fragments
- Stephanie Bird Christa Wolf’s Kein Ort. Nirgends: A Place for Feminist Deconstruction?
- Patrick Bridgewater The Impact of Baudelaire on German Poets and Poetry
- David Walker Genet’s Un Captif amoureux
METAPOESIS
The Russian Tradition from Pushkin to Chekhov
Michael C. Finke

In the work of writers from Pushkin to Chekhov, Finke discloses a pervasive self-referentiality, a running commentary on the literary conventions these texts seem so wholly to embody. Meta poesis examines how—and more importantly, why—a series of major Russian authors spanning the nineteenth century inscribed commentary on their own poetics into their works of drama, narrative poetry, and fiction.

MACROPOLITICS OF NINETEENTH-CENTURY LITERATURE
Nationalism, Exoticism, Imperialism
Jonathan Arac and Harriet Ritvo, editors

"Well-edited, responsible, theoretically sophisticated, and politically engaged."—Nancy Paxton, Northern Arizona University

The dozen essays in this collection explore the relationship between politics and culture by examining developments in a wide range of nineteenth-century writing. New historical data and new interpretive perspectives alter our conception of established masterpieces and provoke new understandings of the political and cultural context within which these works emerged.

Marina Tsvetaeva
The Double Beat of Heaven and Hell
Lily Feiler

“Feiler’s book is the most complete biography so far written. The poet’s life is recorded and interpreted in a new way, meaningful and coherent. Marina Tsvetaeva’s very dramatic life is told in splendid detail.”—Simon Karlinsky, author of Marina Tsvetaeva: The Woman, Her World, and Her Poetry
