Allegories of the Anthropocene
ELIZABETH M. DELOUGHREY

“Allegories of the Anthropocene is a book of oceanic reach, in every sense. Elizabeth M. DeLoughrey’s transformative thinking will reverberate across the environmental humanities, postcolonial studies, and the Anthropocene debates for many years to come.”—Rob Nixon

Sexuality, Disability, and Aging
Queer Temporalities of the Phallus
JANE GALLOP

“Continuing to experiment brilliantly with what critical writing can be and can do, Jane Gallop brings together her career-long concerns with sexuality and gender and gives them a striking new framing in the context of aging and disability studies. At a moment when feminism itself seems to suffer the disregard to which the ‘old’ are consigned, Gallop invests it with the queerness that she locates in aging and disability as well. The result is a major intellectual event and a thoroughly compelling read.”—Lee Edelman
Black Madness :: Mad Blackness
THERÍ ALYCE PICKENS

“In Black Madness :: Mad Blackness, Therí Alyce Pickens offers a compelling provocation: we must begin to read ‘more madly, more Blackly,’ and we can find strategies for doing so in the work of Black speculative fiction. Pickens persuasively argues for the importance of new interpretive strategies in approaching race and disability, ones that trouble linearity, visibility, and the expectation of meaning and resistance. An important development in the folds of Black studies, disability studies, and literary criticism, Black Madness :: Mad Blackness demands reading practices that account for, are accountable to, and originate within Black madness and mad Blackness.”—Alison Kafer

The Difference Aesthetics Makes
On the Humanities “After Man”
KANDICE CHUH

“The Difference Aesthetics Makes reconsiders the centrality of aesthetics to the humanities and elaborates an aesthetics of ‘iliberal’ humanism that emerges from relations of difference, not identity; from dissensus, not consensus. This timely and significant book will be of crucial importance for readers in English, American studies, ethnic studies, anthropology, art history, and beyond.”—Lisa Lowe
