Editor’s Letter 405

DOXA AT LARGE

Environmentalism—Long Live the Politics of Fear 411
Alex Gourevitch

Spaces Stretch Inward: Intersections between Architecture and Minor Literature 425
Irit Katz Feigis

MODELS OF INSECURITY

“Sensitive but Unclassified”: Secrecy and the Counterterrorist State 433
Joseph Masco

Twenty Hanging Dolls and a Lynching: Defacing Dangerousness and Enacting Citizenship in El Alto, Bolivia 465
Helene Risør

DOSSIER ON SEXUAL BOUNDARIES, NATIONAL IDENTITIES, AND TRANSNATIONAL MIGRATIONS IN EUROPE

Introduction: Transgressing Boundaries 487
Éric Fassin and Judith Surkis

National Identities and Transnational Intimacies: Sexual Democracy and the Politics of Immigration in Europe 507
Éric Fassin
Hymenal Politics: Marriage, Secularism, and French Sovereignty 531
Judith Surkis

Turkish Women, West German Feminists, and the Gendered Discourse on Muslim Cultural Difference 557
Rita Chin

Looking at Pictures of Gay Men: Political Uses of Homophobia in Contemporary Poland 583
Agnieszka Graff

Books Received 605
Contributors 609
Coming Attractions

Volume 23, no. 1:

“Racial France”: a special issue on the debates over the place of postcolonial studies in the French archive and in current scholarship, including Jean-François Bayart’s argument for the “irrelevance” of postcolonial studies in contemporary France, Achille Mbembe’s defense of their crucial role in understanding the production of subaltern status and the constitution of historical subjects, and Ann Stoler’s review and critique of the recent return to French colonial historiography; response essays from Sandrine Bertaux, Emilienne Baneth-Nouailhetas, Robert J. C. Young, and Marnia Lazreg; a dossier on contemporary Central African artists examining the legacy of France’s colonial past; Doxa At Large interventions from Leela Gandhi on the new antagonists of postcolonial theory and Sylvie Tissot on the interdiction of the “la voile integrale”; and more . . .
Call for Contributions

Miscellany: A collection of various kinds, especially news clippings, literary extracts, postcards, and images. Includes media accounts of items relevant to public discourse and debate throughout the world. The section seeks to highlight not only the reported phenomena as such but also the mediated nature of media coverage. Public Culture especially seeks pieces that are witty or (unintentionally) ironic. Submissions should include all relevant facts of publication and should be no longer than three pages.

Etymologies: Investigates the contemporary uses and meanings of the terms public, publicity, and public opinion. Short essays (of approximately six to eight pages) that consider the semantics and pragmatics of one or more of these interrelated terms in the context of a particular language and a particular people are welcome. How do these terms compare across cultures and languages? Do their meanings “translate,” and what do their “mistranslations” bode for comparative social theory grounded in what may be hidden ontological statements about civil society?

Arts in Circulation: Reflections and reports on innovative critical cultural work and on the work of art in public. Includes pieces on new kinds of museums; alternative or oral history projects; the expansion of musical performance and recording into forgotten musical histories or the dissemination of a broader range of music; alternative publishing ventures or exhibition practices in film, theater, and dance; innovative cultural work with children; public art such as murals and graffiti; innovative uses of television, radio, or other mass media; and reports on past cultural work.

Sites of Knowledge: Reportage and deliberation on institutions that have made a signal mark on a world region. Research centers, journals, publishing ventures, or any other institution of knowledge production and dissemination can be selected for close attention and engagement through interviews with key participants, direct documentation, and critique. How do institutional sites define and engage their publics? How do they position themselves in global networks of knowledge production? What notable qualities and innovations are worth sharing? The aim of the section is to generate an archive of sites of knowledge through a set of informative and critical reflections.

From the Field: Briefly annotated single photographs for inclusion as a photo feature at the end of the issue. Submissions are not limited by style or content. Contact submissions@publicculture.org for art guidelines.

---

Public Culture, 20 Cooper Square, Suite 517, New York, NY 10003; phone: 212-998-7866; fax: 212-995-4423; e-mail: info@publicculture.org; Web: www.publicculture.org.