Volume 27, no. 2:

Anthony Townsend maps the data deluge currently reshaping urban studies; Theresa MacPhail examines the paradoxes of big data in public health; Arjun Appadurai introduces us to the dynamic materiality of “mediants”; Ash Amin rethinks the sociality and politics of urban public space; Talal Asad talks with Irfan Ahmad about his work to problematize a “seamless web” view of history’s unfolding; Austin Zeiderman, Sobia Ahmad Kaker, Jonathan Silver, and Astrid Wood show how uncertainty shapes contemporary cities and urban life; Nikhil Anand assesses the state of water leakage in Mumbai; Sareeta Amrute interrogates connections between violence and mobility in India; Amy Hinterberger and Natalie Porter examine how viruses and genomes have become sovereign subjects; Bruce O’Neill explores the intimate politics of poverty and consumption in Bucharest; and more . . .
Call for Contributions

Public Culture aims to publish original research of the highest caliber, and we welcome your submissions. We value strong writing, clear argumentation, imaginative theory, and an engaging prose style. Public Culture reaches an audience that transcends scholarly disciplines and extends beyond the academy. We seek work that persuades through evidence, logic, and analysis and that presumes no shared theoretical proclivities, political values, or specialized vocabularies.

Brief opinion-oriented pieces (of 500–3,000 words) run at the front of each issue in the Forum section. Full-length articles (of 6,000–9,000 words) based on original research are at the core. We also feature in-depth discussions with leading contemporary thinkers. Typically, we are familiar only with scholarly labor’s final results, published books and articles, or occasional lectures. The interviews we publish call attention to the backstage of intellectual practice. In addition to original research essays, opinion pieces, and conversations, Public Culture welcomes translations of previously published, groundbreaking essays.

Our sister publication, Public Books (www.publicbooks.org), welcomes proposals for review essays about books (fiction or nonfiction), films, exhibitions, or plays, as well as profiles of intellectuals or literary scenes, visual essays, and multimedia work. Authors interested in submitting to Public Books should send proposals of 500 words or fewer to editorial@publicbooks.org.
