Volume 28, no. 3:

Bharat Venkat traces a history of tuberculosis research to ask how cures come together and come undone; Megan Vaughan explores the development of counseling technologies in contemporary Africa and their effect on the subject; Shannon Cram unravels the politics of permissible exposure for US nuclear workers; Natasha Schüll considers online poker as a technology of self-management; Anthony W. Fontes maps the expanding geographies of extortion in postwar Guatemala; Ayşe Parla and Ceren Ö zgül examine the nexus of property, citizenship, and the nation-state through the Gezi Park protests in Turkey; Shamus Khan interviews noted sociologist Saskia Sassen about her conceptualization of the “global city” and “subterranean power”; and more . . .
Call for Contributions

Public Culture aims to publish original research of the highest caliber, and we welcome your submissions. We value strong writing, clear argumentation, imaginative theory, and an engaging prose style. Public Culture reaches an audience that transcends scholarly disciplines and extends beyond the academy. We seek work that persuades through evidence, logic, and analysis and that presumes no shared theoretical proclivities, political values, or specialized vocabularies.

Brief opinion-oriented pieces (of 500–3,000 words) run at the front of each issue in the Forum section. Full-length articles (of 6,000–9,000 words) based on original research are at the core. We also feature in-depth discussions with leading contemporary thinkers. Typically, we are familiar only with scholarly labor’s final results, published books and articles, or occasional lectures. The interviews we publish call attention to the backstage of intellectual practice. In addition to original research essays, opinion pieces, and conversations, Public Culture welcomes translations of previously published, groundbreaking essays.

Our sister publication, Public Books (www.publicbooks.org), welcomes proposals for review essays about books (fiction or nonfiction), films, exhibitions, or plays, as well as profiles of intellectuals or literary scenes, visual essays, and multimedia work. Authors interested in submitting to Public Books should send proposals of 500 words or fewer to editorial@publicbooks.org.
