Guidelines for Contributors

Radical History Review seeks to further political debate among historians, to explore radical interpretations of the past, and to stimulate cooperation and interaction among all progressive academics and activists.

Radical History Review is organized exclusively around theme-specific issues (i.e., world history, the Americas, empire, transnational labor movements, and so forth). The journal welcomes submissions of articles and essays that correspond with the issues being planned and with currently posted calls for papers. Submissions that are unrelated to these themes will not be considered. We urge readers to check the RHR website regularly for updates on future issues.

Submit all manuscripts by e-mail as Microsoft Word or rich text file attachments to the Managing Editor at contactrhr@gmail.com. Contributions should not exceed 35–40 pages. Radical History Review reserves the right to copyedit manuscripts to conform to the journal’s style, which follows The Chicago Manual of Style, 17th edition. Spelling will be edited to conform to American English. Pieces that are substantially edited will be sent to the authors for review before publication.

Submission of an article implies that it has not been simultaneously submitted or previously published elsewhere. Authors are responsible for obtaining permission to publish any material under copyright. Contributors will be asked to assign their copyright, under certain conditions, to MARHO: The Radical Historians’ Organization, Inc.

The Politics of Boycotts
This issue of Radical History Review investigates the connected histories of anti-racist and anti-imperialist boycotts. From the original Captain Boycott to the struggles for justice in Israel/Palestine, boycotts have challenged global empire through a popular politics of refusal. The issue also features four stunning posters in support of boycott movements in southern Africa, Indonesia, Argentina, and Israel/Palestine.

Poem  Taha Muhammad Ali invites us to think about the intimate politics of refusal and recognition in his 2006 poem “Revenge.”

Features  Andrew Phemister studies the Irish struggle that coined the term “boycott.” Abdel Razzaq Takriti explores the long colonial genealogies of Palestinian anti-Zionist boycotts. Michael Bueckert’s study of the ANC shows how boycotts create transnational anti-Apartheid solidarities. Stephen Pascoe analyzes how Gandhi inspired boycotts in French Mandate Damascus. Allyson Brantley opens up the aesthetic cultures of resistance in her study of ephemera in the Coors beer boycott.

Interview  Joseph Parrott interviews Rev. Richard Righter, a boycott organizer against Gulf Oil.
