Contributors

MIKE ALLEYNE is an associate professor in the Department of Recording Industry at Middle Tennessee State University. His articles have been published in journals such as Bucknell Review, Small Axe, Popular Music & Society, Social & Economic Studies, and The Griot. Both these and his several book chapter contributions mainly highlight conflicts between commercialization and culture in Caribbean music. He is also an editorial board member of the journal, Popular Music & Society.

BIBI BAKARE-YUSUF is an independent scholar with a PhD in interdisciplinary women and gender studies from the University of Warwick. Her research interests focus on gender and youth expressive cultures in the African world, cultural studies, and feminist theory and politics.

DIONNE M. R. C. BENJAMIN-SMITH studied at the College of The Bahamas and the Rhode Island School of Design (RISD) in Providence, Rhode Island. After working commercially in The Bahamas as an advertising and art director for a number of years, she now owns a design and illustration firm in Nassau with her husband, artist Jolyon Smith. She is the recipient of a number of scholarships, grants, and awards and has participated in numerous group exhibitions in The Bahamas, the US, Germany, and the UK.

CHRISTIAN CAMPBELL is a Bahamian poet and cultural critic. He read English and tutored at Balliol College and University of Oxford, and is a PhD candidate in English at Duke University. His work has recently appeared in the Caribbean Review of Books and Indiana Review.

CAROLYN COOPER is professor of literary and cultural studies at the University of the West Indies, Mona, where she teaches Caribbean, African, and African-American Literature. She is the director of the Institute of Caribbean Studies and coordinator of the University’s International Reggae Studies Centre, an academic project she initiated. She is the author of Noises in the Blood: Orality, Gender and the ‘Vulgar’ Body of Jamaican Popular Culture (1993), and Sound Clash: Jamaican Dancehall Culture at Large (2004).

ASHLEY DAWSON is associate professor of English at the College of Staten Island, City University of New York. He is the author of Mongrel Nation: Diasporic Culture and the Making of Postcolonial Britain and co-editor of Exceptional State: Contemporary U.S. Culture and the New Imperialism, both forthcoming.
Sharon L. Green is associate professor of theatre at Davidson College, North Carolina. Her work on community-based theatre has been published in Theatre Topics and Theater, and online in Arts in the Public Interest News. Other work has been published in Theatre Journal and the Journal of Women’s History. She is an active member of the Theatre and Social Change Focus Group of the Association of Theatre in Higher Education.

Glenn A. Elmer Griffin is a licensed clinical psychologist and forensic psychologist in practice in Pasadena, California. He is also professor of psychology and a founding member of the new Department of Critical Theory and Social Justice at Occidental College in Los Angeles.

Idara Hippolyte studied English and mathematics at the University of the West Indies Mona. She contributed to the 2004 edition of Interventions devoted to Jamaican popular culture and completed a doctorate on Jamaican dancehall and postmodernism at the University of Oxford in 2005.

Vivian Nun Halloran is assistant professor of comparative literature at Indiana University, where she teaches Caribbean literature, literary theory, postmodern literature about slavery, and food in popular culture. She is finishing a book manuscript on mourning in Caribbean postmodern historical novels about slavery.

Donna P. Hope is finalizing a PhD in cultural studies at George Mason University, Fairfax. She lectures in the Department of Government, University of the West Indies, Mona. She is the author of Inna di Dancehall: Popular Culture and the Politics of Identity in Jamaica (2006), and has published several articles on dancehall culture.

Wendy Knepper is guest lecturer at Humboldt University, Berlin. Recently, she completed a postdoctoral fellowship project on Patrick Chamoiseau at Harvard University (2003–2004), and New York University (2004–2005). Her main areas of research and teaching include Caribbean literature, postcolonial crime fiction, film, and gender studies.

Brinda J. Mehta is professor of French and francophone studies at Mills College, Oakland. She is the author of three books, Corps infirme, corps infâme: la femme dans le roman balzacien (1992); Diasporic (Dis)locations: Indo-Caribbean Women Writers Negotiate the Kala Pani (2004); and Rituals of Memory in Contemporary Arab Women’s Writing (forthcoming 2007). She is currently finishing her fourth book, “Framing Diaspora in Francophone Caribbean Women’s Writing.”
Kezia Page is assistant professor of English at Colgate University, Hamilton, where she teaches Caribbean and African Diaspora literatures. Her work has appeared in the Journal of West Indian Literature and Anthurium. Her research interests include Caribbean migrancy and diaspora, as well as Caribbean popular culture and national identity.

Jennifer Rahim is a lecturer in English in the Department of Liberal Arts at the University of the West Indies, St. Augustine. Her essays have appeared in Journal of West Indian Literature, MaComere and Anthurium, and Small Axe. She is the author of two volumes of poetry, Mothers Are Not the Only Linguists (1992) and Between the Fence and the Forest (2002). A collection of short stories, Songster and Other Stories, and a collection of poems, You Are Morning in Me, are due to be published by Peepal Tree Press in 2006.

Sonjah Stanley Niaah is a lecturer in cultural studies at the University of the West Indies, Mona. She is currently working on three book projects including two edited collections on Jamaican culture, one (with Bibi Bakare-Yusuf) a reader on dancehall culture, and the other on the production of celebrity. She has published on dancehall in Space and Culture, Discourses in Dance, African Identities, and Proudflesh.
Africa Today

In the forefront in publishing Africanist, reform-minded research

Edited by Gracia Clark, Maria Grosz-Ngaté, John Hanson, and Ruth Stone

ISSN 0001-9887

Since 1954, Africa Today has been in the forefront in publishing Africanist, reform-minded research and provides access to the best scholarly work from around the world on a full range of political, economic, and social issues. Multicultural in perspective, it is not only a much-needed alternative forum for serious analysis and discussion but offers positive solutions to the problems facing Africa today.

Institutions:
print $112
electronic $100.80
print & electronic $156.80

Individuals:
print $45
electronic $40.50
print & electronic $49.50

Now available on...

INSCRIBE
E-Publishing Partners of IU Press

HTTP://IUPJOURNALS.ORG
1.800.842.6796
Research in African Literatures

Edited by John Conteh-Morgan

ISSN 0034-5210

Founded in 1970, Research in African Literatures is the premier journal of African literary studies worldwide and provides a forum in English for research on the oral and written literatures of Africa, as well as information on African publishing, announcements of importance to Africanists, and notes and queries of literary interest.

Institutions:  print $117
            electronic $105.30
            print & electronic $163.80

Individuals:  print $42.50
              electronic $38.25
              print & electronic $46.75

Now available on...inscribe
e-publishing portal of IU Press

HTTP://IUPJOURNALS.ORG
1.800.842.6796
Wadabagei: A Journal of the Caribbean and Its Diaspora (ISSN 1091-5753) is committed to facilitating the exchange of ideas among Caribbean scholars worldwide. It is a multidisciplinary journal that publishes scholarly articles and occasional creative works from diverse fields including politics, literature, sociology, and religion, and reviews recent publications in Caribbean studies.

Wadabagei places special emphasis on the acculturation of Caribbean people in North America but explores the Caribbean experience in all geographic locations where Caribbean people have settled.

Editors:
J.A. George Irish, Editor-in-Chief
(Caribbean Research Center, Medgar Evers College, CUNY)
Holger Henke, Managing Editor
(Caribbean Research Center, Medgar Evers College, CUNY)
D. Alissa Trotz, Assistant Editor (Queen’s University)

Editorial Board:
Fitzroy A. Baptiste (University of the West Indies, St. Augustine)
Calvin B. Holder (College of Staten Island, CUNY)
Basil Wilson (John Jay College of Criminal Justice, CUNY)
Carole M. Berotte-Joseph (Dutchess Community College, SUNY)
Aubrey Bonnett (College at Old Westbury, SUNY)
Roy Bryce-Laporte (Colgate University)
Coleen A. Clay (York College, CUNY)
Charles Green (Hunter College, CUNY)
Eda F. Harris-Hastick (Medgar Evers College, CUNY)
Roberta Walker Kilkenny

Ex-officio
Anton L. Allahar (University of Western Ontario)
Shona N. Jackson (Stanford University)

Wadabagei is a Garifuna name for the conch shell that is frequently used to awaken Caribbean villages and announce community gatherings. It symbolizes the historic call to action by Haitian slaves and the Caribbean people’s continuing struggle for self-expression and self-determination.

The next issue will be Volume 7, Number 2.
ORDER YOUR SUBSCRIPTION NOW!
For submission guidelines please visit www.lexingtonbooks.com/Journals.
LATIN AMERICAN RESEARCH REVIEW

The Journal of the Latin American Studies Association (LASA)
Editor: Peter M. Ward, The University of Texas at Austin

Current Contents Include:
The Origins of Presidential Conditional Agenda-Setting Power in Latin America
EDUARDO ALEMÁN and GEORGE TSEBELIS

Television and Neopopulism in Latin America: Media Effects in Brazil and Peru
TAYLOR C. BOAS

Gendering Class in Latin America: How Women Effect and Experience Change in the Class Structure
AMY BELLONE HITE and JOCELYN S. VITERNAA

Mortality Decline in Cuba, 1900-1959: Patterns, Comparisons, and Causes
JAMES W. MCGUIRE and LAURA B. Frankel

Individual $40, Institution $180, Student $27
Canada/Mexico, add $18, Other foreign, add $24

University of Texas Press, Box 7819
Austin, TX 78713-7819
Phone 512-232-7621, Fax # 512-232-7178
Announcing

INscribe e-publishing portal of IU Press

The electronic publishing platform of Indiana University Press will launch in early 2007. INscribe will include the current volumes of the 28 journals published by the Press, a two-year backrun where available, and beginning in 2008, the Press’s front-list book titles.

The Press has partnered with the Association of African Universities to offer free and unrestricted access to the content included in INscribe to their member institutions. Users will be encouraged to download and circulate content for educational and community uses. Please help to support this effort by subscribing to the e-version of any of our fine journals.

http://inscribe.iupress.org
http://iupjournals.org