CONTRIBUTORS

Charles Campbell is a Jamaican-born artist whose work maps the relationship between meaning and image, particularly as it relates to his personal and cultural background. Educated in Canada and the United Kingdom, Campbell holds an MA in fine arts from Goldsmiths College, University of London, and a BFA from Concordia University, Montreal. He has exhibited widely in North America, the Caribbean, and Europe, representing Jamaica in events such as the Santo Domingo Biennial, and in touring exhibitions and international festivals. He currently lives and works in Victoria, Canada.

Nadi Edwards is a senior lecturer in literatures in English at the University of the West Indies, Mona. He has published widely on West Indian literature and Caribbean popular culture, and is currently writing a book on anglophone Caribbean literary and cultural theories.

Ifeona Fulani teaches African and African diasporic literatures and writing at New York University. Her research interests include black feminisms and Afro-futurism. She is the author of the novel Seasons of Dust (1997) and numerous short stories, and is currently working on a manuscript titled “Erzulie’s Daughters: Black Women Reconfiguring the Black Atlantic.”

Jocelyne Guilbault is a professor of ethnomusicology at the University of California, Berkeley. She has published several articles on ethnographic writings, aesthetics, and world music, and is the author of Zouk: World Music in the West Indies (1993). She is currently completing a book-length manuscript entitled “Governing Sounds: The Politics and Aesthetics of the Calypso Music Scene.”

Michael Hanchard is a professor of political science at Northwestern University. He is the author of Orpheus and Power: The Movimento Negro of Rio de Janeiro and São

Geoffrey Philp is the author the novel Benjamin, My Son (2003), the collection of short stories Uncle Obadiah and the Alien (1997), and four collections of poetry, among them, Hurricane Center (1998) and Xango Music (2001). His reviews, articles, poems, and short stories have also appeared in such forums as The Mississippi Review, The Caribbean Writer, The Oxford Book of Caribbean Short Stories, and Small Axe. He teaches English and creative writing at Miami-Dade College.

She is the author of “The Routes of Global Nostalgia in Cristina Garcia’s Dreaming in Cuban,” published in Sargasso: A Journal of Caribbean Literature, Language, and Culture (2002), and is currently working on a book-length manuscript on the way Caribbean diasporic literature represents the intersections between globalization and Caribbean identity.

David Scott teaches at Columbia University, where he is a professor of anthropology. He is the author most recently of Conscripts of Modernity: The Tragedy of Colonial Enlightenment (2004) and editor (with Charles Hirschkind) of Powers of the Secular Modern: Talal Asad and His Interlocutors (forthcoming 2005). He is also an associate editor of the new revised Macmillan/Thomson International Encyclopedia of the Social Sciences (forthcoming 2007).

THE YORUBA DIASPORA IN THE ATLANTIC WORLD

Edited by Toyin Falola and Matt D. Childs

Moving beyond generic descriptions, this innovative book allows readers to trace the experiences of one cultural group, the Yoruba, throughout the cycle of the slave experience in the Americas. The contributors employ a variety of disciplinary perspectives to provide a detailed study of how the Yoruba were enslaved and later integrated into the Atlantic world.

BEHIND THE SMILE

The Working Lives of Caribbean Tourism

George Gmelch

Behind the Smile is an inside look at the world of Caribbean tourism as seen through the working lives of 21 men and women who work in the tourist industry in Barbados. The workers come from every level of tourism, from maid to hotel manager, beach gigolo to taxi driver, red cap to diving instructor. Moving through the various sites in which “hosts” and “guests” meet—airport, hotel, beach, and tourist attractions—these highly personal accounts offer insight into complex questions surrounding tourism.
