McJihad: Islam in the U.S. Global Order  Timothy Mitchell  1

Anthrax “Я” Us  Susan Willis  19

Visual and Performance Studies: A New History of Interdisciplinarity  Catherine Soussloff and Mark Franko  29

Tenure Denied: Anti-unionism and Anti-intellectualism in the Academy  Joel Westheimer  47

Homo on the Range: Mobile and Global Sexualities  Jigna Desai  65

Extracting Men from Semen: Masculinity in Scientific Representations of Sperm  Lisa Jean Moore  91
Jigna Desai is assistant professor of Asian American, postcolonial, feminist, and queer studies in the Department of Women’s Studies at the University of Minnesota. Her book on the transnational cultural politics of South Asian diasporic cinema is forthcoming from Routledge. She is also studying second-generation South Asian Americans and their consumption of Indian and Bollywood cinema.

Mark Franko is the author of The Work of Dance: Labor, Movement, and Identity in the 1930s (Wesleyan University Press), Dancing Modernism/Performing Politics (Indiana University Press), Dance As Text: Ideologies of the Baroque Body (Cambridge University Press), The Dancing Body in Renaissance Choreography (Summa), and coeditor of Acting on the Past: Historical Performance across the Disciplines (Wesleyan University Press). He has published numerous articles in anthologies and journals such as Res, Drama Review, Theatre Journal, Annals of Scholarship, Discourse, and Performance Research. His research has been supported by the Getty Research Center, the American Philosophical Society, the American Council of Learned Societies, and the France/Berkeley Fund. A dancer and choreographer, Franko has presented his work internationally since 1985 and is professor of dance and performance studies at the University of California, Santa Cruz.

Timothy Mitchell is a professor of politics at New York University, where he is director of the Hagop Kevorkian Center for Near Eastern Studies. His most recent books are Questions of Modernity (University of Minnesota Press) and Rule of Experts (University of California Press).

Lisa Jean Moore, a medical sociologist, is currently assistant professor at the College of Staten Island, CUNY. Recently, she coauthored the second edition of Gender and the Social Construction of Illness (Altamira) with Judith Lorber. She has published articles from the Human Genital Anatomy Project that explore the construction and maintenance of gender and sex differences in genital anatomies of the twentieth century. She is currently preparing a book on the representations of human semen for Routledge.
Catherine Soussloff is professor of art history at the University of California, Santa Cruz. She is the author of The Absolute Artist: The Historiography of a Concept (University of Minnesota Press) and the editor of Jewish Identity in Modern Art History (University of California Press). Her recent essays on film, “Maya Deren Herself,” in Maya Deren and the American Avant-Garde (University of California Press), and photography, “Art Photography, History, and Aesthetics,” in Art History and Its Institutions (Routledge) deal with the meaning of the subject and subjectivity in art, the focus of her forthcoming book on Viennese art history and modernism. Soussloff also works in the field of early modern Italian art.

Joel Westheimer is associate professor of education at the University of Ottawa. A former New York City public schools teacher, he is author of Among School Teachers: Community, Autonomy, and Ideology in Teachers’ Work (Teachers College Press). He has also published widely in journals and magazines, such as Phi Delta Kappan, Harvard Educational Review, Educational Administration Quarterly, Curriculum Enquiry, the School Field, Journal of Teacher Education, and Education Week. He is currently preparing a book (with coauthor Joseph Kahne), Civic Intentions: What Schools and Colleges Must Do to Renew Democracy. He can be reached by e-mail at joelw@uottawa.ca.

Susan Willis is associate professor in the literature program and English department at Duke University. Her writing aims to reveal the contradictions embedded in ordinary daily life situations and practices. She is coauthor of Inside the Mouse: Work and Play at Disney World (Duke University Press) and author of A Primer for Daily Life (Routledge).