Contents

In the Afterlife of the Duke Case  Robyn Wiegman, Wahneema Lubiano, and Michael Hardt  1

Reality Television: a Neoliberal Theater of Suffering  Anna McCarthy  17

Biocommunicability: The Neoliberal Subject and Its Contradictions in News Coverage of Health Issues  Charles L. Briggs and Daniel C. Hallin  43

Writing into a Void: Representing Slavery and Freedom in the Narrative of Colonial Spanish America  Herman L. Bennett  67

Urban Transculturations  Priscilla Archibald  91

Freedom from Transculturation: A Response to Priscilla Archibald  Alberto Moreiras  115

A Response to Alberto Moreiras  Priscilla Archibald  123
Priscilla Archibald is associate professor of Spanish at Roosevelt University. Her article “Cosmopolitismo andino: Explorando el lado femenino de Lima” (“Andean Cosmopolitanism: Exploring Lima’s Feminine Side”) was published in a special edition of Revista Iberoamericana (June–September 2007). She is currently completing a book titled Andean Modernities: The Politics of Representation that deals with textual and visual representation in the Andes from the 1920s to today.

Charles L. Briggs is the Alan Dundes Distinguished Professor in the Department of Anthropology of the University of California, Berkeley. His recent books include Stories in the Time of Cholera: Racial Profiling during a Medical Nightmare (with Clara Mantini-Briggs, University of California Press, 2003) and Voices of Modernity: Language Ideologies and the Politics of Inequality (with Richard Bauman, Cambridge University Press, 2003). He is currently completing a book on narrative and violence and researching the politics of health in Venezuela’s Bolivarian revolution and constructions of states, citizenship, and neoliberalism in news coverage of health in Cuba, Ecuador, Venezuela, and the United States.
Daniel C. Hallin is professor of communication at the University of California at San Diego and chair of the Department of Communication. He holds a Ph.D. in political science from the University of California, Berkeley. His books include The “Uncensored War”: The Media and Vietnam (Oxford University Press, 1986), We Keep America on Top of the World: Television News and the Public Sphere (Routledge, 1993), and, with Paolo Mancini, Comparing Media Systems: Three Models of Media and Politics (Cambridge University Press, 2004). He writes extensively on media and war, the political economy of journalism, and media systems in Europe and Latin America.

Michael Hardt teaches in the Literature Program at Duke University. He is author of Gilles Deleuze and coauthor with Antonio Negri of Labor of Dionysus, Empire, and Multitude.

Wahneema Lubiano teaches in the Department of African and African American Studies and the Literature Program at Duke University. She is editor of and contributor to The House That Race Built (Duke University Press, 1994) and has published in various journals including Social Text, Cultural Critique, Callaloo, Z Magazine, and boundary 2.

Anna McCarthy is associate professor and associate chair of cinema studies at New York University. She is the author of Ambient Television (Duke University Press) and coeditor, with Nick Couldry, of MediaSpace (Routledge). Currently coeditor of Social Text, she is working on a book about governing by television in the fifties.

Alberto Moreiras is the Sixth Century Chair in Modern Thought and Hispanic Studies at the University of Aberdeen in Scotland. He is the author of Linea de sombra: El no sujeto de lo politico (Palinodia), The Exhaustion of Difference: The Politics of Latin American Cultural Studies (Duke University Press), and Tercer espacio: Duelo y literatura en America Latina (ARCIS/LOM), among other books. His Piel de lobo: Morfologia de la razon imperial española is forthcoming from Biblioteca Nueva. He is a coeditor of the Journal of Spanish Cultural Studies.
Robyn Wiegman is professor of women’s studies and literature at Duke University, where she served as director of the women’s studies program from 2001 to 2007. She is currently completing a book on identity objects of study in the contemporary U.S. university.