boundary 2
an international journal of literature and culture boundary 2 approaches problems in literature and culture from a number of politically, historically, and theoretically informed perspectives.

The journal remains committed to understanding the present and approaching the study of national and international culture and politics through literature and the human sciences.

For more than a quarter of a century, Radical History Review has stood at the point where rigorous historical scholarship and active political engagement converge.

Articles in RHR address issues of gender, race, sexuality, imperialism, and class, stretching the boundaries of historical analysis to explore Western and non-Western histories.

Common Knowledge is devoted to what its editors have termed “civilian scholarship.” Its mission is to open lines of communication between the academy and the community of thoughtful people outside its walls. Challenging the ways we think about theory and its relevance to humanity, the journal has turned its attention to such varied topics as peace studies, the conciliation of worldviews, and vernacular language of the later Middle Ages.
