Contributors

Matthew J. Christensen is associate professor of English at the University of Texas–Pan American. He recently published Rebellious Histories: The Amistad Slave Revolt and the Cultures of Late Twentieth-Century Black Transnationalism (SUNY Press). His current research focuses on the sub-Saharan African detective novel.

Jane Elliott is senior lecturer in contemporary literary and cultural studies in the Department of English at King’s College London. She is author of Popular Feminist Fiction as American Allegory: Representing National Time (Palgrave Macmillan) and co-editor, with Derek Attridge, of Theory after “Theory” (Routledge). She is currently working on a book on neoliberal microeconomics and popular aesthetics.

Gabriel Giorgi is associate professor at New York University. He is the author of Sueños de exterminio. Homosexualidad y representación en la literatura argentina contemporánea (Beatriz Viterbo) and co-editor of Excesos de vida. Ensayos sobre biopolítica (Paidós). He is currently working on a book project on biopolitics and culture in Latin America.

Gillian Harkins is associate professor of English and adjunct associate professor of gender, women, and sexuality studies at the University of Washington, Seattle. She is the author of Everybody’s Family Romance: Reading Incest in Neoliberal America (University of Minnesota Press) and recent essays on pedophilia and incarceration.

Neferti X. M. Tadiar is professor of women’s, gender, and sexuality studies at Barnard College, Columbia University. She is author of Things Fall Away: Philippine Historical Experience and the Makings of Globalization (Duke University Press) and Fantasy-Production: Sexual Economies and Other Philippine Consequences for the New World Order (Hong Kong University Press).

Alys Eve Weinbaum is associate professor of English at the University of Washington. She is author of Wayward Reproductions: Genealogies of Race and Nation in Transatlantic Modern Thought (Duke University Press), co-editor, with Susan Gillman, of Next to the Color Line: Gender, Sexuality, and W. E. B. Du Bois (University of Minnesota Press), and co-author of The Modern Girl around the World (Duke University Press). She is working on a book on the afterlife of slavery in biocapitalism.
Carey Young is an artist based in London, who teaches at the Slade School of Art. Her work has recently been exhibited at Tate Britain (London), the New Museum and MoMA/PS1 (New York), and SFMoMA (San Francisco). She is represented by Paula Cooper Gallery, New York.