Shameem Black is a fellow in the School of Culture, History, and Language at the Australian National University. She is the author of Fiction across Borders: Imagining the Lives of Others in Late Twentieth-Century Novels (2010). Her current research concerns the imaginative life of yoga in a globalizing world.

Madhu Dubey is professor of English and African American studies at the University of Illinois at Chicago. She is the author of Black Women Novelists and the Nationalist Aesthetic (1994) and Signs and Cities: Black Literary Postmodernism (2003).

Armando García is assistant professor of Hispanic languages and literatures at the University of Pittsburgh. He is completing his first book, “Impossible Indians: The Native Subjects of Decolonial Performance,” a study of theater and performance artists, racial formations, and the legacies of colonialism in the Americas.

H. N. Lukes is assistant professor in the Department of Critical Theory and Social Justice at Occidental College. She has published in the Oxford Literary Review, Women’s Studies Quarterly, and Women and Performance and has contributed to the collections Homosexuality and Psychoanalysis (2001) and America First: Naming the Nation in US Film (2007).

Richard T. Rodríguez is associate professor of English and Latina/Latino studies at the University of Illinois at Urbana-Champaign. The author of Next of Kin: The Family in Chicano/a Cultural Politics (2009), he is currently writing a book on queer Latino visual representation, fantasy, and the politics of social space.
Swinehart ∙ The Enregisterment of Colla in a Bolivian Comedy