Contributors

Arjun Appadurai is Goddard Professor of Media, Culture and Communication at New York University. He is also a Tata Chair Professor in the Tata Institute for the Social Sciences (Mumbai, India) and senior research partner in the Max Planck Institute for the Study of Religious and Ethnic Diversity in Göttingen, Germany. He is the author of numerous books and articles on globalization, media, and urbanization. His most recent book is The Future as Cultural Fact: Essays on the Global Condition (2013).

Barbara Browning teaches in the Department of Performance Studies at New York University. She is the author of two fictocritical novels, I’m Trying to Reach You (2012) and The Correspondence Artist (2011), as well as works of cultural criticism and theory.

Patricia Ticineto Clough is professor of sociology at the Graduate Center and Queens College, CUNY. She is author of Autoaffection (2000) and coeditor (with Jean Halley) of The Affective Turn: Theorizing the Social (2007) and (with Craig Willse) of Beyond Biopolitics: Essays on the Governance of Life and Death (2011). Her book The End(s) of Measure: A Sociological Aesthetic, about big data and ethnographics, is forthcoming. She also is a practicing psychoanalyst in her third year of training.

Brent Hayes Edwards is professor in the Department of English and Comparative Literature at Columbia University. His books include The Practice of Diaspora (2003), Uptown Conversation: The New Jazz Studies (2004), and the forthcoming Epistrophies: Jazz and the Literary Imagination. His translation of Michel Leiris’s Phantom Africa will be published in 2016.

Susan Leigh Foster, choreographer and scholar, is distinguished professor in the Department of World Arts and Cultures/Dance at UCLA. She is the author of Reading Dancing: Bodies and Subjects in Contemporary American Dance (1986), Choreography and Narrative: Ballet’s Staging of Story and Desire (1996), Dances That Describe Themselves: The Improvised Choreography of Richard Bull (2002), and Choreographing Empathy: Kinesthesis in Performance (2010). Three of her danced lectures can be found at the Pew Center for Arts and Heritage website (danceworkbook.pcah.us/susan-foster/index.html).

Benjamin Lee is professor of anthropology and philosophy at the New School, where he also served as provost from 2006 until 2008. Lee’s primary academic interests include contemporary China; the cultural dimensions of globalization, particularly the effects of global financial flows; and modern theories of language. He is the coauthor, with Edward LiPuma, of Financial Derivatives and the Globalization of Risk (2004).

André Lepecki is associate professor in the Department of Performance Studies at New York University. He is the author of Exhausting Dance: Performance and the Politics of Movement (2006) and editor of several anthologies on dance and performance theory, including DANCE (2012). He is currently guest professor at Stockholm University of the Arts.

Bob Meister is professor in the History of Consciousness Department at the University of California, Santa Cruz, and director of the Bruce Initiative on Rethinking Capitalism. He is a political and social theorist who writes on jurisprudence, theology, and economics and is completing

Toby Miller is emeritus distinguished professor at the University of California, Riverside; the Sir Walter Murdoch Professor of Cultural Policy Studies at Murdoch University; Profesor Invitado at the Universidad del Norte; professor of journalism, media, and cultural studies at Cardiff University/Prifysgol Caerdydd; and director of the Institute of Media and Creative Industries at Loughborough University in London.

Judith A. Peraino is professor of music and director of the LGBT Studies Program at Cornell University. She has written articles on medieval secular songs as well as on the rock artists Blondie, David Bowie, and PJ Harvey. Her books include Listening to the Sirens: Musical Technologies of Queer Identity from Homer to Hedwig (2006) and Giving Voice to Love: Song and Self-Expression from the Troubadours to Guillaume de Machaut (2011).

Dylan Rodríguez is professor and chair of the Department of Ethnic Studies at the University of California, Riverside. He is the author of two books: Forced Passages: Imprisoned Radical Intellectuals and the U.S. Prison Regime and Suspended Apocalypse: White Supremacy, Genocide, and the Filipino Condition. His work focuses on how regimes and logics of social liquidation, cultural extermination, physiological evisceration, and racist terror become normalized features of everyday life in post–civil rights and postracial moments. He is guided by an attention to how (extra)ordinary people resist, revolt against, and otherwise inhabit this condition.

Alex Trimble Young is a Dornsife Preceptor Postdoctoral Fellow at the University of Southern California, where he teaches US literature. His other recent articles can be found in Settler Colonial Studies and Western American Literature.

Iván Zatz is associate professor of social science and cultural studies at Pratt Institute.