Jennifer Bajorek is assistant professor of comparative literature at Hampshire College and a research associate in the Faculty of Art, Design and Architecture at the University of Johannesburg, South Africa. She teaches and writes on literature, philosophical aesthetics, and photography. She is the author of Counterfeit Capital (2009) and How to Write a Visual History of Liberation: Photography and Decolonial Imagination in Africa (forthcoming).

Nico Baumbach is assistant professor of film studies at Columbia University. He holds a PhD in literature from Duke University. He is currently working on two book-length manuscripts: a study of the politics of cinema in Badiou, Rancière, and Agamben; and a rethinking of documentary theory titled “The Anonymous Image.”

Alexander R. Galloway is a writer and computer programmer working on issues in philosophy, technology, and theories of mediation. Professor at New York University, he is the author of several books, most recently Laruelle: Against the Digital (2014).

Sulgi Lie is a postdoctoral fellow in the School of Cinematic Arts at the University of Southern California after teaching for many years in the Division of Film Studies at the Free University Berlin. He is the author of The Exteriority of Film: On Political Film Aesthetics (2012) and coeditor of Jacques Rancière’s film critical writings. Currently he is working on a book on slapstick comedy.

Amy Villarejo is professor in the Department of Performing and Media Arts at Cornell University. She writes widely on cinema, media, and queer life; her most recent book is Ethereal Queer (2014).

Damon R. Young is assistant professor of French and film/media at the University of California, Berkeley. His first book, Making Sex Public (forthcoming), examines the intertwining of sexual and social imaginaries in French and US cinema since the 1960s.

Genevieve Yue is assistant professor of culture and media at Eugene Lang College, The New School. Her essays and criticism have appeared in October, Grey Room, Film Quarterly, and Film Comment. She is a coeditor of Discourse: Journal for Theoretical Studies in Media and Culture, and her current projects include two books: the first is China Girls: Film, Feminism, and the Material Image, about gender and filmic materiality, and the second is a cultural and technical history of the blurred image.