a journal for the intermingling of literary, cultural and theoretical scholarship symplokē is a comparative theory and literature journal. Our aim is to provide an arena for critical exchange between established and emerging voices in the field. We support new and developing notions of comparative literature, and are committed to interdisciplinary studies, intellectual pluralism, and open discussion. We are particularly interested in scholarship on the interrelations among philosophy, literature, culture, criticism and intellectual history, though we will consider articles on any aspect of the intermingling of discourses and disciplines.

How might "the turn to corporality" in premodern studies join "the turn to the posthuman" in more modern studies, in order to help modern ideas regarding the human body turn once again, toward "history," and by implication, toward a deeper temporality? Further, how will academic and scientific discourses of the posthuman affect our commitments--intellectual and otherwise--to humanism and the humanities? The BABEL Working Group was founded to bring together scholars working in premodern and modern studies, as well as in the sciences, in order to work together on these questions.

Essays on Humans and the Humanities

MICHAEL BÉRUBÉ

This fresh collection of Bérubé’s essays and weblog entries demonstrates the relevance and vitality of cultural criticism.

“Warning: these essays can provoke fits of uncontrollable laughter. But don’t be fooled. For all his wicked wit, Michael Bérubé is less an entertainer than a reformer, a man with a passionate vision of how things might be in America and of how the humanities are and aren’t helping to get us there.”—Bruce Robbins, Columbia University

Diaspora is dedicated to the multidisciplinary study of the history, culture, social structure, politics and economics of both the traditional diasporas – Armenian, Greek, and Jewish – and those transnational dispersions which in the past three decades have chosen to identify themselves as ‘diasporas.’ These encompass groups ranging from the African-American to the Ukrainian-Canadian, from the Caribbean-British to the new East and South Asian diasporas.

“Bérubé reminds us, with insight, wisdom, and good humor, why a liberal temperament—intellectually open, seriously self-reflective, and critically minded—should always be at the heart of the academic experience.”

—ROGER W. BOWEN, general secretary, American Association of University Professors

“This more than timely defense of literature, liberal education, and liberal values will inspire allies, drive antagonists to sputter, and, most amazingly, cause both to think.”

—TODD GITLIN, author of The Intellectuals and the Flag

“A wonderful common-sense read for both liberals and conservatives; indeed, for anyone who wants to know what really goes on in college classrooms.”
