

Submissions

Authors submitting manuscripts should go to our web-based submissions system at philosophy.cornell.edu/philreview and create an account and upload the paper there. There is a text box for comments or questions. Only one submission per corresponding author allowed at a time, and only one submission per twelve months.

Please visit read.dukeupress.edu/the-philosophical-review/pages/Submission_Guidelines to see our editorial policies.

Manuscripts must not have been published previously, in part or in whole, or be under consideration for publication elsewhere. Neither the author's name nor the author's affiliation should be included in the manuscript, and any acknowledgments or references to the author's own work should not reveal the author's identity. Any prefatory or explanatory remarks intended for the editors or readers should be brief and should be in the email and not part of the submitted manuscript, so that they may be kept anonymous by the editorial office.

The Philosophical Review practices a system of triple-blind review. The identity of a manuscript's author is never revealed to referees, nor is the identity of referees ever revealed to authors, and the author's identity is not revealed to editors until after they have reached a final (accept/reject) decision on the manuscript.

Double-space all text, including extracts and notes; all pages must be numbered and have margins of at least one inch on all sides. Please use a 12-point font size. We accept papers in PDF format only. We do not accept papers in Word, RTF, or LaTeX. Please be sure to include an approximately 150-word abstract at the top of your paper. There is no set maximum for paper length; however, authors are generally discouraged from submitting papers that exceed 15,000 words, including abstract, references, and footnotes. Manuscripts chosen for publication must eventually conform to the Chicago Manual of Style, seventeenth edition. Include a separate list of works cited at the end of the paper, using full author names (not first initials).

Book Reviews

Unsolicited book reviews are not accepted. Publishers and authors may send books to be considered for review to Book Review Editor, Philosophical Review, Cornell University, 217 Goldwin Smith Hall, Ithaca, NY 14853-4601. The Philosophical Review generally does not respond to publisher or author inquiries about books for possible review, nor do we generally solicit specific books for review.

IN THIS ISSUE

The Epistemic and the Zetetic

Jane Friedman

Logical Combinatorialism

Andrew Bacon

The Attitudes We Can Have

Daniel Drucker

BOOK REVIEWS