Theater

Volume 48, Number 3

Tom Sellars, Editor

Yale School of Drama
Yale Repertory Theatre

Yale School of Drama
DAVID BRUIN is a DFA candidate at Yale School of Drama and the associate editor of Theater. He is currently working as a coeditor on A Moment on the Clock of the World, an anthology of new writing inspired by The Foundry Theatre.

THOMAS F. DEFRAÎNTZ is professor of African and African American studies; dance; gender, sexuality, and feminist studies; and theater studies at Duke University. He directs SLIPPAGE: Performance|Culture|Technology, a research group that explores emerging technologies in live performance applications.

AMY HOLZAPFEL is associate professor of theater at Williams College. Her current book project, The Commons of Neoliberal Tragedy: Choruses in Twenty-First Century Theatre and Performance, tracks the resurgence of the chorus as a resource for social capital.

JENNIFER KRASINSKI is a contributing editor to Theater and a senior editor at Artforum.

ERNESTO PUJOL is a performance artist with a socially engaged practice that opens emblematic architecture and mythical landscape through empathic aesthetic experience. He is the author of Walking Art Practice: Reflections on Socially Engaged Paths (2018).

TOM SELMAR is editor of Theater and professor in the practice of dramaturgy and dramatic criticism at Yale School of Drama.

ALISA SOLOMON is a professor at the Columbia Journalism School, where she directs the arts and culture concentration master’s program. Her books include Re-Dressing the Canon: Essays on Theater and Gender (1998) and Wonder of Wonders: A Cultural History of Fiddler on the Roof (2013).